AM I THE GOOD SAMARITAN?

The parable of the Good Samaritan always challenges us to distinguish and recognise God in each other. However, more than fulfil the Mosaic law of love thy neighbour, Jesus teaches us some home truths that are truly confronting and penetrating. Samaritans were considered outsiders and outcasts by ordinary Jews. Yet in the parable, it was the Samaritan who was the unlikely hero. For he showed love and compassion to the person in need. On the contrary, the priest and the Levite who were considered the respected class of society and the custodians of tradition were found wanting. They put tradition and law in the way of basic human love. Thus, in crafting the characters in their cultural and religious context, Jesus really upset the tulip cart. He questioned the prevailing assumptions and stereotyped attitudes. He turned the presumed order of moral goodness upside down. The holders of tradition failed the test of good neighbour while the outcast proved himself an unlikely champion of basic human decorum, mercy and kindness.

What does it mean for us who have listened to the parable again today in the context of our lives and relationships? Are we in the same way challenged in our thinking, attitudes and behaviour? What are the assumptions and prejudices in society and in each of us that need to be questioned by the confronting and incisive lesson of the Gospel? Who are the Samaritans of our time? Who are those that we consider undeserving and incompetent of conforming to our moral norms and standards? Who are those that are considered outsiders and therefore not entitled to what we are entitled to? Therefore this is a golden opportunity for me to reach out to others, those who are really in need of my presence. Thus I can also be called the Good Samaritan of this parish, society or where ever I live.
