LORD, TEACH US TO PRAY...

The Gospel opens with the disciples asking Jesus to “teach” them to pray. They remind Jesus that John the Baptist taught his disciples how they should pray. The prayer format Jesus teaches them is now called the “Our Father” and is familiar to all Christians. This prayer is simple and direct and focused on the needs of the community of faith. Jesus counsels us to petition God as our Father for “our” daily bread, that God forgive “our” sins, and that God lead “us” away from temptation. Do you hear the communal language? This prayer is meant to unite us to one another and to God.

In New Testament times Jewish prayers were long and formulaic. Prayer was a public event performed on street corners so that men could be seen (Matthew 6:5). Jesus doesn’t want his disciples to pray like this. Jesus counsels against praying like “babbling” pagans. Those pagans believed they would be heard because of the multiplication of many words (Matthew 6:7). The prayer style of pagans was contractual and very specific in nature. Pagan gods were thought to be capricious and always ready to trip up the petitioner. One had to be very specific with all petitions presented to these pagan gods. The gifted golden touch of King Midas could turn a stone to gold—but also a child. One could never be too careful. Jesus teaches his disciples to pray in a simple, concise, and clear manner.

Our prayer should be simple and be focused on the needs of the community, not just on ourselves. In his book Prayer, Our Deepest Longing, Fr. Ronald Rolheiser notes that the disciples wanted Jesus to teach them to pray like he did because they wanted access to Jesus' power to “be big-hearted, to love beyond his own tribe, to love the poor and the rich alike, to live inside charity, joy, peace, patience, goodness, long-suffering, fidelity, mildness, and chastity, despite everything within life that militates against these virtues.”

Our prayer response this week will be a thoughtful and private recitation of the “Our Father.” Carve out a few extra moments in your quiet time each day this week to pray it slowly and thoughtfully, paying special attention to the communal aspect of the prayer. In a special moment let us pray for our new Archbishop John Wilson and new Prime Minister Boris Johnson. May God bless all of us.
